

Answers:

1. Tieback
 - a. Connects to the case
2. Statement
 - a. The claim we are purporting to be true
3. Example
 - a. Supports the explanation that institutions see students will see more than just the sum of their grades – gives a specific example of an admissions committee
4. Explanation
 - a. Explains why this change would make applicants more holistic

Screenshot:

SEET	This house would require students to take an extracurricular to graduate (Gov Side)
Explanation	This is the first step towards revamping the education system to be more equitable, and by doing so, we are improving students' chances at being successful.
Statement	Requiring students to take an extracurricular makes university applications more holistic.
Example	For example, consider an admissions committee: they could now make better decisions based on the candidates' interests and hobbies.
Tieback	When students apply for university, they'll be considered more than just the sum of their grades. Extracurriculars therefore help forge better and realistic applications.